EDI 553 Teaching Students from Poverty
Poverty can create chronic, devastating changes in the brain. It would be easy to look at the statistics and want to give up. The good news is that there are powerful solutions to boost attendance, lessen behavior issues and turn your classroom into a high performance success, but you need the engagement strategies to help you do your job well. High performing students need high performing teachers. Every student deserves a caring, engaging teacher. Attitudes and the strategies of yesterday are not enough.

EDI 555 Social Emotional Learning
Students will build proficiency in social-emotional learning skills with quick and purposeful daily practice. Teachers/Staff will be provided with social emotional activities. Each week students will practice all 5 areas of social-emotional learning.

EDI 557 What We Say to Students Matters
In this course participants will examine the role of teacher language in the classroom as it relates to relationships with students, student achievement, student motivation and positive classroom culture development. The techniques can be used in person in a synchronous online learning community.

EDI 559 Teaching After Critical Change
This course explores the connections between brain health and student success. The principles of “Culturally Responsive Pedagogy” will be reviewed. Participants will learn how to promote engagement through the use of metacognition and motivation practices.
